UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

9 BARBARA MAY,
10 Plaintiff,
11 v.
12 HONEYWELL INTERNATIONAL,
13 INC., a foreign corporation; and
METLIFE, INC., d/b/a and/or a/k/a
METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE
COMPANY, a foreign corporation,

14 Defendants.

No. CV05-1957 RSM

MOTION TO COMPEL RESPONSE TO DISCOVERY

Noted for Consideration:
August 4, 2006

15 This motion arises out of defendant's refusal to respond substantively to an interrogatory.
16 Defendant MetLife denied a claim for short-term disability benefits, relying in large part on the 17 medical opinion of Dr. Dennis Gordan, who reviewed plaintiff Barbara May's medical records.
18 Dr. Gordan - whom MetLife styles an "Independent Physician Consultant" - has reviewed
19 medical records for MetLife 457 times in the past and earned substantial income for that work.
20 Ms. May seeks discovery of the number of times Dr. Gordan has opined that a person is disabled 21 and the number of times he has opined that a person is not disabled. MetLife refused to provide 22 these numbers on two grounds: First, it states that "the literal answer is . . . zero," because 23 Dr. Gordan does not determine whether a person is disabled, but rather opines as to a person's 24 "functional abilities" and as to whether medical records "support functional restrictions and/or

1 limitations." Second, MetLife contends that review of 457 documents would be overly
 2 burdensome. No other objections to this request have been asserted.

3 Ms. May seeks a substantive answer to her interrogatory rather than a "literal" one. In 4 the alternative, plaintiff seeks review of Dr. Gordan's 457 prior opinions pursuant to Federal 5 Rule of Civil Procedure 33(d).

6 I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

7 Barbara May worked for defendant Honeywell for over 32 years, most recently as an 8 assembler. In 1990, Ms. May began experiencing pain in her back, legs, arms and neck. After a 9 decade of pain, she sought help from Dr. Richard Neiman, M.D., who diagnosed severe
 10 fibromyalgia, multilevel degenerative disk and joint disease, and possible spinal stenosis. Her 11 condition worsened in the latter half of 2004. In January 2005 Dr. Neiman determined that 12 Ms. May was no longer able to work.

13 Ms. May applied for short-term disability benefits through Honeywell's Managed 14 Disability Program. MetLife, the administrator of the Short-Term Disability Benefits program, 15 denied that claim. Ms. May appealed that denial. Relying on a medical records review by 16 Dr. Gordan, MetLife denied her appeal on February 24, 2005. The letter denying Ms. May's
 17 appeal sets forth the following standard for substantiating a disability:

18 Disability is not determined solely by diagnosis, but is based on functional ability 19 we must take into consideration current restrictions and limitations that are supported by clinical evidence that substantiates an inability to perform each of 20 the essential functions of your own occupation in accordance with the Plan.

21 On appeal you would have needed to provide clinical medical documentation 22 supporting functional limitations/ restrictions of a severe nature that would have prevented you from working.

23 Declaration of Mel Crawford Ex. 1 at 2 (emphasis added). After a lengthy recitation of the 24 records review performed by Dr. Gordan, MetLife states: "The consultant [Dr. Gordan] noted

1 that there was no objective information provided to support that you could not perform those 2 activities of your occupation." Id. at 3; see also Ex. 2 (Dr. Gordan's report).

3 II. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

4 In reviewing a disability benefit denial, courts may consider, and plaintiffs may discover,
 5 "the independence or neutrality of physicians or others whose medical opinions defendants relied 6 upon in terminating plaintiff's disability benefits." See e.g. Medford v. MetLife Ins. Co., 244 F.
 7 Supp. 2d 1120, 1129 (D. Nev. 2003) (citing Waggener v. Unum Life Ins., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1179
 8 (S.D. Cal. 2002)). Plaintiff seeks to ascertain the independence or neutrality of Dr. Gordan, and 9 therefore served MetLife with the following interrogatory on April 11, 2006:

10 INTERROGATORY NO. 1: With respect to Dennis S. Gordan, M.D., 11 please state:

12 (a) the number of times since January 1, 2000, that you have asked Dr.
 13 Gordan to review medical records with respect to a beneficiary of a long-term or short-term disability plan;

14 (b) the number of times Dr. Gordan has concluded and/or opined with 15 respect to any such beneficiary that the person was disabled and/or entitled to benefits under the relevant plan;

16 (c) the number of times Dr. Gordan has concluded and/or opined with 17 respect to any such beneficiary that the person was not disabled and/or was not entitled to benefits under the relevant plan;

18 (d) the total amount of all payments that you have made to Dr. Gordan
 19 for all work he performed at your request since January 1, 2000.

20 Crawford Decl.Ex. 3.

21 MetLife responded to part (a) by stating that Dr. Gordan had reviewed medical records
 22 for MetLife on 354 occasions in 2004, and 103 occasions in January and February 2005.

23 Crawford Decl. Ex. 4. MetLife then responded to parts (b) and (c) by stating:
 24

1 (b) and (c) MetLife does not maintain this information or otherwise track Dr.
 2 Gordan's opinions. Making that determination would require MetLife to 3 manually review the number of files stated above and is unduly burdensome.

4 Id. Counsel for plaintiff contested the claim that the burden of reviewing 457 documents was 5 undue, but nevertheless offered to review redacted copies of Dr. Gordan's reports himself.
 6 Crawford Decl. Ex. 5. Defense counsel responded that she would discuss the matter with her
 7 client. Crawford Decl. Ex. 6. Twice more, plaintiff's counsel sought a substantive response to 8 parts (b) and (c), finally stating that a motion to compel would be forthcoming. Crawford Decl.
 9 Ex. 7 and 8.

10 MetLife then supplemented its response:

11 (b) and (c) Zero. MetLife does not ask physician consultants to determine
 12 whether or not a claimant is disabled or entitled to benefits. Rather, physician
 13 consultants are asked to provide medical opinions. For example, in this case, Dr.
 14 Gordan was asked whether Ms. May's medical records "support functional 15 restrictions and/or limitations from 1/7/05 and beyond" and was asked to "please 16 offer an opinion of the employee's functional abilities." (See DEF 0143-0145).
 17 Accordingly, MetLife does not believe that Dr. Gordan has ever been asked or 18 provided an opinion regarding whether a claimant was "disabled" as defined by 19 the relevant plan or entitled to benefits under the relevant plan. Moreover, to 20 precisely determine whether Dr. Gordan provided such opinions it would be 21 unduly burdensome to determine the substance of opinions from 457 medical 22 reviews. In order to do that, MetLife would have to manually review paper
 23 reports that were prepared for each of the 457 files that Dr. Gordan provided 24 opinions for. Those reports are not maintained in an electronically searchable format. They are maintained as images of paper documents.

25 Crawford Decl. Ex. 9. The cover letter accompanying the supplemental response reiterated that 26 "the literal answer to Interrogatory No. 1 (b) and (c) is zero." Id. at 2.

27 III. ARGUMENT

28 A. Assessment of "functional ability" is tantamount to determination of "disability"

29 The information plaintiff seeks is clear and simple – how often does Dr. Gordan opine in 30 MetLife's favor, and how often does he opine to the benefit of the employee. Although MetLife 31 first objected only on the ground that this request was unduly burdensome, it later responded that

1 Dr. Gordan has never rendered such an opinion because he only assesses “functional abilities” or 2 gives opinions regarding whether medical records “support functional restrictions and/or 3 limitations.” That wordsmithing does not comport with the letter or spirit of FRCP 33.

4 “Functional abilities” and “functional restrictions and/or limitations” are phrases plainly
 5 synonymous with “disability.” MetLife used those very terms to explain to Ms. May how it
 6 would determine if she was entitled to disability benefits. Crawford Decl. Ex. 1 at page 2.
 7 While Dr. Gordan's reports may not have included “literal” use of the words “disabled” or “not
 8 disabled”, his opinions regarding claimants' “functional abilities” or “functional restrictions”
 9 amount to the same.

10 The primary purpose of interrogatories is to ascertain facts and procure evidence, thereby
 11 narrowing the number of issues for trial and promoting early settlement. See e.g. Alamo Theatre
 12 Co. v. Loew's, Inc., 22 F.R.D. 42, 45 (D. Ill. 1958). This purpose is thwarted when a responding 13 party avoids discovery by “stressing a hypertechnical interpretation of the interrogatory.” See 14 Ryan v. Board of Police Comm'r's, 96 F.3d 1076, 1082 (8th Cir. 1996); see also Anderson v.
 15 Beatrice Foods Co., 127 F.R.D. 1, 5 (D. Mass. 1989).

16 Plaintiff asks this Court to compel MetLife to provide a real response to this abundantly
 17 clear interrogatory, rather than the “literal” one given in its supplemental response.

18 B. Review of 457 documents is not unduly burdensome

19 MetLife claims that it does not “maintain [] information [on disability findings] or 20 otherwise track Dr. Gordan's opinions.” Yet it had no trouble ascertaining that Dr. Gordon
 21 reviewed medical records for MetLife 457 times between 2004 and February 2005. Its only 22 objection to providing a tally of the number of times Dr. Gordan concluded that a person either
 23 was or was not disabled is that the tally would be “unduly burdensome.”

1 Undue burden in discovery occurs where “the burden or expense of the proposed 2 discovery outweighs its likely benefit, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in 3 controversy, the parties’ resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation, and the 4 importance of the proposed discovery in resolving the issues.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 26 (b)(2)(iii). A 5 party asserting undue burden as justification for refusing to answer an interrogatory must 6 establish not only extraordinary hardship, but also that the “hardship is unreasonable in the light
 7 of the benefits to be secured from the discovery.” Snowden v. Connaught Laboratories, Inc., 8 137 F.R.D. 325, 333 (D. Kan. 1991) (quoting C. Wright and A. Miller, 8 Federal Practice and 9 Procedure § 2214, p. 647-48 (1970)). The objecting party “must allege specific facts which 10 indicate the nature and extent of the burden, usually by affidavit or other reliable evidence.”
 11 Jackson v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 173 F.R.D. 524, 528-529 (D. Nev. 1997). Even where the 12 responding party must go to some effort and expense to compile the information sought, an 13 interrogatory is not unduly burdensome when what it seeks is particularly relevant. In re Folding
 14 Carton Antitrust Litig., 83 F.R.D. 256, 265 (N.D. Ill. 1979). Inefficient record-keeping is not an 15 excuse for failure to respond to an interrogatory. Fagan v. District of Columbia, 136 F.R.D. 5, 7
 16 (D.D.C. 1991).

17 Plaintiff seeks relevant information. She is entitled to assess Dr. Gordan’s independence
 18 or neutrality, or lack thereof. It is hard to imagine that a company of MetLife’s size and 19 resources would be unduly burdened by having to review 457 documents. MetLife does not 20 claim that it would be too expensive to review the records. Nor does MetLife claim that it would 21 have to review a much larger group of files to determine which records Dr. Gordan reviewed –
 22 those files were apparently readily identifiable. MetLife merely claims that because the 23 documents are not word-searchable, it should not be expected to “manually review”

24

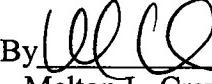

1 Dr. Gordan's reports to determine his conclusions. Finally, any burden MetLife may claim
2 exists can easily be lifted by plaintiff's offer to review redacted versions of the documents, as 3 permitted under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 33(d).

4 IV. CONCLUSION

5 Plaintiff respectfully requests an order compelling MetLife to substantively respond to 6 plaintiff's interrogatory within the letter and spirit of the discovery rules. In the alternative,
7 plaintiff seeks an order compelling MetLife to make Dr. Gordan's 457 medical records reviews
8 available for inspection, so that plaintiff may compile the information for herself.
